Grays Harbor County is developing a new COMPREHENSIVE LAND USE PLAN

Comprehensive planning at-a-glance:

We're developing a new Comprehensive Plan to address current land use conditions and create a community-supported vision for where land use and development in unincorporated Grays Harbor County could occur over the next decade.

We'll start work this summer by engaging our communities, creating a vision for long-term planning, and developing an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) as well as a new Comprehensive Plan and regulations.

We want to hear about your vision for long-term planning in Grays Harbor County! Visit our website to learn more and share your feedback by taking a brief survey before August 15, 2025.

A new Comprehensive Land Use Plan is a roadmap for our County's future

The new Plan will provide:

- 1 A shared vision for long term planning
- 2 Land use goals and policies that describe how and where current and future development should occur
- 3 A land use map that identifies areas for current and future land uses

It will use community feedback to create a framework that guides future development and identifies area for future residential, resource, and business uses to enhance our quality of life.

The vision and goals will turn into the actions, laws, and guidelines and that affect decisions in unincorporated Grays Harbor County related to:

There will be three phases to developing the Comprehensive Plan...

We're developing an EIS as part of this work

Alongside community visioning, we'll kick off the planning process with scoping for an EIS under the Washington State Environmental Policy Act. The three phases of the EIS process follow along with the three phases of Comp Plan development.

The EIS will be an opportunity for the public, local, state, and federal agencies, and tribal governments to participating in developing and analyzing proposed land use changes.
